

EAT AND DRINK

The best new bars, restaurants and nightlife spots in Queens

By ROZANNE GELBINOVICH November 20, 2015

As New Yorkers, we have an embarrassment of riches. Not only do we have our pick of well-established institutions and classics in the making to choose from when it comes to our eats, drinks and goods, there are new places opening faster than you can Instagram.

Here we take a look at those new kids on the block, from dining to nightlife in Queens.

Julia's

Oenophiles will appreciate the selection of local and organic vinos at Julia's. Go pure or try some of the wine and beer cocktails, like the Pepper Infused riesling, infused with candied jalapeño and rimmed with white pepper, or the Black Velvet -- half NY stout and half NY sparkling white. The family-friendly bar and restaurant also serves up cheese plates and small bites, including melt sandwiches and several turnovers, from mushroom and goat cheese to braised beef, that get rave reviews from patrons. 818 Woodward Ave., Ridgewood, 917-909-1314
